DAILY AND WEEKLY

The "referendum" submitted to the Kentuckian's subscribers is disclosing the fact that about 95 per cent of them favor the Daily over the Weekly. At many postoffices every subscriber, white and colored, has elected to take the daily. There are so few weekly readers among the Kentuckian's constituency that we are seriously hesitating about putting on a weekly edition. The Courier-Journal has long since discontinued its weekly paper and except as a purely local paper the weekly no longer meets the requirements of the farmer who rides in an automobile and has a daily mail delivered at his door. We may conclude to push the daily alone and not re-enter the weekly field abandoned 30 years ago.

More than 50 persons were arrested for celebrating the German offensive in Chicago. Early in the evening police were attracted to one house by strains of "Die Wache Am Rhein," and as a result of arrests made there. Federal and civil authorities combined in a drive throughout a German settlement, where it was found that a general celebration was being held in many places, and in many houses groups were found singing German songs. Bonfires also were lit in some parts of the city.

An official report says it is permitted to say what some have known for a long time, that the British never intended to try to hold the forward positions in this region if the Germans attacked in the force expected. There is every reason to believe that harder fighting than has yet taken place will develop shortly. The Germans, in the British view, cannot now hesitate in carrying on their attack and it is a case of break through or admit defeat.

American mechanical ingenuity and the devices it produces operated by American fighters are going to win the war on land, on sea and in the air, in the opinion of Henry Ford, once a pacifist, but now one of America's hardest workers for democracy's victory.

Germany's great effort to break the quiet front in the west apparently is no nearer accomplishment than it was on the day the great drive started, and she is estimated to have lost 400,000 men in the futile effort during less than a week's fighting.

Ira Barnett, a Louisville man, says he invented a long range gun in 1916 and sent the plans to the British government, and later was notified that his invention was not recommended. He now thinks the Germans got hold of his plans and used them to make the gun that shoots 76 miles.

THE TIME AND PLACE

PERISHING'S CASUALTY LIST

NET TUESDAY MORNING AT EIGHT O'CLOCK AT OFFICE
OF H. B. A.

Next Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock a large force of men and women will meet at the H. B. M. A. for the purpose of beginning the big campaign to secure enough applications to insure the establishment in Hopkinsville of the big cigar factory proposed by the American Cigar Co.

Many ladies and men have pledged themselves to devote a day to this important matter and will begin the day with a determination to succeed.

The publicity committee has been doing much to aid this work but has bigger things planned for next week. A large number of applications have been received already and the rapidity with which these have been, and are, coming in has given the committee new hope and new life and a practical assurance that nothing now can prevent Hopkinsville having the factory which is so much needed. With 300 or more women and girls working at good wages in a modern factory a large part of the onerous burden of living will be lifted and independence established in many homes.

The reports of the two committees who visited a like factory at Paducah should be convincing evidence that would cause any girl who wants to earn her own living to sign an application for work in this factory.

The moral surroundings will be carefully looked after and the health of the employees carefully guarded. The ministers of the various churches the school teachers, the mothers, and the Civic League have all entered into this work heartily and are lending their efforts to the end that we shall not fail.

The wages will be $4.00 per week to start. After three or four weeks the employee will be put on piece work and soon is earning from $8.00 to $15.00 per week.

The Secretary of the H. B. M. A. Mr. Dalton, has rendered the city of Hopkinsville a valuable service in bringing to its citizens this golden opportunity and if the business people do not take advantage of the opportunity theirs is the loss.

Will B. Owen has notified his mother here of his safe arrival in France March 24.

J. Summers Cooper, one of Hopkinsville's best known young men, has resigned his place as book-keeper for the American Snuff Co., and will again volunteer for service. Mr. Cooper made several attempts last year but failed on account of underweight. He has put himself through a special course of dieting and the fact that the weight requirements have been lowered will also help him this time in getting into some branch of the army. He is anxious for immediate service. Mr. Cooper is a graduate of a military school and has had much of the necessary training.

With appropriate ceremonies the High School service flag will be dedicated this morning at 10:30 o'clock.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

The program is as follows:

FOLLOWING THE FLAG.

Under date of March 23, Harry Tunks, one of the "stars" on the Kentuckian's service flag, writes from Houston, Tex:

"You probably will be surprised to hear from me, but I just couldn't help writing and telling you how much I enjoyed reading four of the latest copies of the Daily Kentuckian which were sent to me.

The paper is surely a great deal better than I expected it to be, and after reading the copies gave them to another Hoptown boy who is in the Medical Corps here, whom I chanced to meet and he sure was glad to get them, because it was just like getting a letter from home.

Give my regards to all the bunch. Am getting along fine and have gained between 5 to 10 pounds since enlisting.

As it is getting late I will have to close, wishing you the best of success with the Daily.

Yours respectfully,
Private Harry A. Tunks, A. S. S. C.
113th Aero Service Squadron,
Ellington Field,
Houston, Texas.

Leslie Brown, of the Fruit Hill vicinity, in this county, has enlisted in the United States Navy and left this week for Norfolk where he will go in training. Mr. Brown has been a teacher for several years in this and other counties, is a life graduate of the Western State Normal School, and for the past few months has been Government Farm Agent for Pike county, Ky. He is a bright, intelligent and energetic young man and an able teacher. He is just the kind of a man that will make good in the U. S. Navy.

Will B. Owen has notified his mother here of his safe arrival in France March 24.

With appropriate ceremonies the High School service flag will be dedicated this morning at 10:30 o'clock.

DOZEN SHIPS FROM JAPAN

(By International News Service.)

Washington, March 28.—The war trade board announced tonight the purchase of twelve Japanese ships of an aggregate tonnage of 100,000. Negotiations for 200,000 additional tons are under way. In return Japan is to get an equivalent tonnage in steel plates.

GERMANY'S SECRET PLANS.

Germany's secret plans of conquest have been again brought to the light in a remarkable manner by the publication of a secret communication sent by Berlin to Vienna last year, outlining Germany's intentions. It was written by the then Chancellor Michaelis, and through some means fell into the hands of Hugo Haase, leader of the Independent Socialist in the Reichstag, and was read by him to the Main Committee of that body. The following significant passages are quoted from the secret communication of Chancellor Michaelis:

"The motive of all of Germany's acts is the lack of territory, both for the development of commerce and colonization. Germany has to solve two problems—the freedom of the seas and the opening of a route to the southeast. And these two problems can only be solved through the destruction of England."

"Our object is the permanent securing of the German Empire in Central Europe and the extension of its territory. No one who understands the significance of this war can doubt that, in spite of our wish to be moderate, we shall not allow ourselves to be deterred from extending the borders of the empire and from, under all circumstances, annexing such territories as are fitted for colonization and are not subjected to the influence of the sea power.

"We weaken her (Russia) materially by taking away her border territories, the Baltic provinces. By using skillful policies the Baltic provinces can easily be Germanized. They will be settled with Germans and their population will double itself. That is the reason why they must be annexed.... The frontier between the German Empire and Poland must be materially altered.

"In the Vosges, the boundary line must be improved by the annexation of some valleys, so that the German frontier troops can no longer be fired upon from French territory. France will lose Brie and a strip of land west of Luxembourg. The value of Brie in an economic and military sense is evident from the fact that 16,000,000 tons of iron ore are produced there. For the safeguarding of the German and Luxembourg iron industry, Longwy must remain in our hands."

These extracts are from a document which promises to become historic, as showing the real purpose of Germany as contrasted with the profuse declarations made by the Chancellor to the Reichstag regarding Germany's desire for peace and its repudiation of any wish to make violent conquests.

EXPULSION DEMANDED.

(By International News Service.)

Washington, March 28.—The red flag of the Wisconsin election waved again in the Senate this afternoon. Loyalty and Americanism were the issue. John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, made a savage attack on the Republican candidate, Lenroot, and demanded that LaFollette be expelled from the Senate.

ANOTHER DELAY.

(By International News Service.)

Washington, March 28.—Plans for speedy draft legislation were thrown into confusion through the reopening of the controversy between Provost Marshall General Crowder and members of the House Military committee over its terms. The controversy may delay the legislation from three weeks to a month.

LAUNDRY STRIKE

(By International News Service.)

Washington, March 28.—Wheatless days so far as the households are concerned were abolished tonight by order of the Food Administration.

Restrictions continue, however, on all public eating places.

BREAD CARDS

(By International News Service.)

Washington, March 28.—Bread cards and bread lines for Americans are only a few months away. Chairman Lever, of the House Agricultural committee declared this afternoon. The statement came in the midst of an impassioned plea for the passage of the House bill proposing to loan $7,500,000 to farmers to aid in buying spring wheat seed. Conservative Republicans joined with the Southern Democrats in blocking action on the measure.

OUR SERVICE FLAG

With April 1 only three days off, Hindenburg finds himself sixty miles from Paris, with the head of his army in the jaws of the British Lion.

ooo

Evidence is accumulating that an offensive on the Italian front is now being planned by the Germans. The Austrians are bringing up reinforcements and are evidently counting upon the success of the German drive in France.

ooo

The great offensive of the Germans has about petered out. Instead of going to Paris through the British line like a hot knife through a cake of butter, they have retaken a part of the ground they yielded a year ago, an area about the size of Trigg county. The British are now firmly standing on their new horseshoe-shaped line waiting for the next move.

ooo

Tuesday night British airmen took heavy toll from the German infantry in Bapaume. No official figures are at hand but from a compilation made personally the correspondent is convinced that at least 130 German airplanes have been brought down by the last five days. Bapaume was turned into an inferno by squadrons of British aviators. Their bombs tore to pieces whatever was left of the place. The work of the British airmen since the beginning of the battle has been one of the brightest pages. Bitter battles in the air have been fought by scores of aviators and the service has proved fully its ability to smother the German airmen at a critical time.

ooo

After six days of terrific fighting the German offensive in France is beginning to show signs of losing its momentum. The progress of the enemy has materially slackened and the form of the dent made in the allied line west of Cambrai has begun to resemble the familiar wedge-like salient instead of the broad straight forward movement of the offensive which carries all before it. At its apex this wedge has gone beyond Albert to the south of the old allied line as it stood a year ago when von Hindenburg began his "strategic retreat."

From this point the line runs off to the northeast at a gentle angle with the line to the south running back until it reaches the Oise river. In spite of tremendous exertions and terrible losses the German efforts to widen the tip of this salient were defeated on Tuesday. The British lines have stood firm to the north and have forced the Germans to turn southward toward the point of least resistance.

That night was an agony of misery to him. He could not sleep. Just cried and whimpered in his bunk, because on the morrow the draft was to sail for France, where he would see death on all sides, and perhaps be killed himself. On the steamer, crossing the channel, he would have jumped overboard to escape, but was afraid of drowning.

Arriving in France, he and the rest were huddled into cattle cars. On the side of each uncarried in white letters,

"Lamurie 40, Chevaux 8." After hours of bumping over the uneven French roadsides they arrived at the training base of Rouen.

At this place they were put through a week's rigid training in trench warfare. On the morning of the eighth day they paraded at ten o'clock, and were inspected and passed by General II—, then were marched to the quartermaster's, to draw their gas helmets and trench equipment.

At four in the afternoon they were again hustled into cattle cars. This time the journey lasted two days. They disembarked at the town of Frevent and could hear a distant dull booming. With knees shaking, Lloyd asked the sergeant what the noise was, and nearly dropped when the sergeant replied in a somewhat bored tone:

"Oh, them's the guns up the line. We'll be up there in a couple o' days or so. Don't worry, my laddie, you'll see more o' 'em than you want before you get 'ome to Blighty again, that is, if you're lucky enough to get back. Now lend a hand there unloadin' them cars, and quit that everlastin' shakin'. I believe ye scared." The last with a contemptuous sneer.

They marched ten kilos, full pack, to little dilapidated village, and the sound of the guns grew louder, constantly louder.

The village was full of soldiers who had come to inspect the new draft, the men who were shortly to be their mates in the trenches, for they were going "up the line" on the morrow, to "take over" their certain sector of trenches.

The draft was paraded in front of battalion headquarters and the men were assigned to companies.

Lloyd was the only man assigned to D company. Perhaps the officer in charge of the draft had something to do with it, for he called Lloyd aside:

"Lloyd, you are going to a new company. No one knows you. Your bed will be as you make it, so for God's sake, brace up and be a man. I think you have the stuff in you, my boy, to go while her eyes pleaded for him to stay.

Every time he saw a recruiting sergeant he'd slink around the corner out of sight, with a terrible fear gnawing at his heart. When passing the big recruiting posters, and on his way to business and back he passed many, he would pull down his cap and look the other way from that awful finger pointing at him, under the caption, "Your King and Country Need You;" or the boring eyes of Kitchener, which burned into his very soul, causing him to shudder.

The next day the battalion took over their part of the trenches. It happened to be a very quiet day. The artillery behind the lines was still, except for an occasional shell sent over to let the Germans know the gunners were not asleep.

In the darkness, in single file, the company slowly wended their way down the communication trench to the front line. No one noticed Lloyd's white and drawn face.

After they had relieved the company in the trenches, Lloyd, with two of the old company men, was put on guard in one of the traverses. Not a shot was fired from the German lines, and no one paid any attention to him crouched in the dark.

On the first time in, a new recruit is not required to stand with his head "over the top." He only "sits it out," while the older men keep watch.

At about ten o'clock, all of a sudden, he thought hell had broken loose, and crouched and shivered up against the parapet. Shells started bursting, as he imagined, right in their trench, when in fact they were landing about a hundred yards rear of them, in the second lines.

Having saved up a few pounds, he decided not to leave the house, and to sham sickness, so he stayed in his room and had the landlady serve his meals there.

Every time there was a knock at the door he trembled all over, imagining it was a policeman who had come to take him away to the army.

One morning his fears were realized. Sure enough, there stood a policeman with the fatal paper. Taking it in his trembling hand he read that he, Albert Lloyd, was ordered to report himself to the nearest recruiting station for physical examination. He reported immediately, because he was afraid to disobey.

The doctor looked with approval upon Lloyd's six feet of physical perfection, and thought what a fine guardsman he would make, but examined his heart twice before he passed him as "physically fit." It was beating so fast.

From the recruiting depot Lloyd was taken, with many others, in charge of a sergeant, to the training depot at Aldershot, where he was given an outfit of khaki, and drew his other equipment. He made a fine-looking soldier, except for the slight shrinking in his shoulders and the hunted look in his eyes.

At the training depot it does not take long to find out a man's character, and Lloyd was promptly dubbed "windy." In the English army "windy" means cowardly.

The smallest recruit in the barracks looked on him with contempt, and was not slow to show it in many ways.

Lloyd was a good soldier, learned quickly, obeyed every order promptly, never groused at the hardest fatigues. He was afraid to. He lived in deadly fear of the officers and "noncoms" over him. They also despised him.

One morning about three months later his enlistment Lloyd's company was paraded, and the names picked out for the next draft to France were read. When his name was called, he did not step out smartly, two paces to the front, and answer cheerfully, "Here, sir," as the others did. He just faintly entered in the ranks and was carried to barracks amid the sneers of the rest.

That night was an agony of misery to him. He could not sleep. Just cried and whimpered in his bunk, because on the morrow the draft was to sail for France, where he would see death on all sides, and perhaps be killed himself. On the steamer, crossing the channel, he would have jumped overboard to escape, but was afraid of drowning.

Arriving in France, he and the rest were huddled into cattle cars. On the side of each uncarried in white letters,

"Lamurie 40, Chevaux 8." After hours of bumping over the uneven French roadsides they arrived at the training base of Rouen.

At this place they were put through a week's rigid training in trench warfare. On the morning of the eighth day they paraded at ten o'clock, and were inspected and passed by General II—, then were marched to the quartermaster's, to draw their gas helmets and trench equipment.

At four in the afternoon they were again hustled into cattle cars. This time the journey lasted two days. They disembarked at the town of Frevent and could hear a distant dull booming. With knees shaking, Lloyd asked the sergeant what the noise was, and nearly dropped when the sergeant replied in a somewhat bored tone:

"Get up, you white-livered blighter! Curse you and the day you ever joined D company, spoiling their fine record! It'll be up against the wall, and a good job too. Get hold of him, men, and if he makes a break, give him the bayonet, and send it home, the cowardly sneak. Come on, you, move, we've been looking for you long enough."

Lloyd, trembling and weakened by his long fast, tottered out, assisted by a soldier on each side of him.

They took him before the captain, but could get nothing out of him but:

"For God's sake, sir, don't have me shot, don't have me shot!"

The captain, utterly disgusted with him, sent him under escort to division headquarters for trial by court-martial, charged with desertion under fire.

They shoot deserters in France.

During his trial, Lloyd sat as one dazed, and could put nothing forward in his defense, only an occasional "Don't have me shot!"

His sentence was passed: "To be shot at 3:38 o'clock in the morning of May 18, 1916." This meant that he had only one more day to live.

He did not realize the awfulness of his sentence; his brain seemed paralyzed. He knew nothing of his trip, under guard, in a motor lorry to the sandbagged guardroom in the village, where he was dumped on the floor and left, while a sentry with a fixed bayonet paced up and down in front of the entrance.

Bully beef, water and biscuits were left beside him for his supper.

The sentry, seeing that he ate nothing, came inside and shook him by the shoulder, saying in a kind voice:

"Cheero, laddie, better eat something. You'll feel better. Don't give up hope. You'll be pardoned before morning. I know the way they run these things. They're only trying to scare you, that's all. Come now, that's a good lad, eat something. It'll make the world look different to you."

The good-hearted sentry knew he was lying about the pardon. He knew nothing short of a miracle could save the poor lad.

Lloyd listened eagerly to his sentry's words, and believed them. A look of hope came into his eyes, and he reluctantly ate the meal beside him.

In about an hour's time, the chaplain came to see him, but Lloyd would have none of him. He wanted no person; he was to be pardoned.

The artillery behind the lines suddenly opened up with everything they had. An intense bombardment of the enemy's lines had commenced. The roar of the guns was deafening. Lloyd's fears came back with a rush, and he cowered on the earthen floor with his hands over his face.

The sentry, seeing his position, came in and tried to cheer him by talking to him:

"Never mind them guns, boy, they won't hurt you. They are ours. We are giving the Boches a dose of their fire."

He Betrayed His Country.

own medicine. Our boys are going over the top at dawn of the morning to take their trenches. We'll give 'em a taste of cold steel with their sausages and beer. You just sit tight now until they relieve you. I'll have to go now, lad, as it's nearly time for my relief, and I don't want them to see me a-takin' with you. So long, laddie, cheero."

With this, the sentry resumed the pacing of his post. In about ten minutes' time he was relieved, and a D company man took his place.

As dawn began to break, he could discern little dark objects protruding from the ground all about him. Curiosity mastered his fear and he crawled to one of the objects, and there, in the uncertain light, he read on a little wooden cross:

"Pte. H. S. Wheaton, No. 1670, 1st London Regt. R. F. Killed in action, April 25, 1916. R. I. P." (Rest in Peace).

When it dawned on him that he had been hiding all night in a cemetery his reason seemed to leave him, and a mad desire to be free from it all made him rush madly away, falling over little wooden crosses, smashing some and trampling others under his feet.

NEW EAGLE

This new mask is now used by Belgian soldiers. It protects the face of the fighter. The eye protector can be drawn back when not in use. Some sort of screen wire is arranged so as to see through when aiming the gun. Its advantages are that it can be attached to the ordinary helmet and gives the appearance of ancient warriors.

In spite of his two years of war, Private Peat, who comes here on Saturday to speak at the Tabernacle is one of the happiest people on earth. He has a smile that it was worth going to war to get, and he is optimistic from the soles of his feet up. When asked one day what he thought was the most important thing an American soldier should learn before going to France, he quickly replied:

"The second verse of the 'Star Spangled Banner.'

It was not the expected answer, and he was asked to explain.

"So he won't be starting continually impromptu fights and getting into needless trouble. We of Canada don't know the second verse of 'O Canada' any better than you do the second verse of 'The Star Spangled Banner.' The Germans know this, too. So when things are rather dull we Canadians would often hear Fritz singing OUR national anthem. When we first heard it on Dominion Day, July 1, 1915, we thought it a compliment. We didn't know the Hun well then. But when Fritz had finished the first verse he called out to us across the barbed wire of No Man's Land:

"Oh, Canuck. You sing the second verse."

"Well, we couldn't sing the second verse when we didn't know it. So we replied with a chorus of bombs, and it started too much trouble. I do hope the camp singing your soldiers are having will keep your boys from falling into this little trap of our enemy across the way."

HEAR PRIVATE PEAT, TABERNACLE, SATURDAY NIGHT, MARCH 30.His Own Soldiers Story:*"TWO YEARS IN HELL AND BACK WITH A SMILE."

For Mothers and Fathers of American Boys.

PRIVATE PEAT—Two years on the Western front, through the horrors of Ypres, long before the average war lecturer knew what war was, is back here to tell us there are worse things than war. He was there when the Huns first used poison gas. He knows fighting in the trenches, the life and hardships and triumphs of the common soldier, and he knows how to tell about them. He brings a new idea in war lectures. He is inspirational, and he carries his listeners far above the field of battle to the thought of higher and better things. He brings a message of comfort to the mothers' hero at home, and no one is better able to bring cheer, for he comes back from his two years in hell WITH A SMILE.

BENEFIT of THE RED CROSS.

PRIVATE PEAT saw his whole company, ammunition gone, surrounded by Germans and captured. Shot through the chest, lying two days in the open he was finally rescued and carried back to his own lines. His right lung is gone—his right arm is powerless. But he returns with a smile, a fine example of that high courage and good cheer which have carried the British soldier through these years of hell with never a cry of despair. He talks in deadly earnest, but there is also a fine humor and the spirit of youth and adventure in all he says. This young Canadian with the blue honor shoulder straps of the First Canadian Contingent is a needed tonic in a wealth of war speakers. As the New York Sun says: "He does the trick where others had only half succeeded."

PRIVATE PEAT has written his own story, which you should read. But his lecture and his book are not the same. You should hear him too.

Prices: 35 and 50 cents, Including War Tax.
